Standards for Emory Athletics Identity Use

The Emory Eagles Athletics identity is one of Emory University’s most visible representations and has a significant impact on how the university is perceived by people inside and outside Emory. In order to maintain a strong identity, Emory Athletics must convey a consistent image.

The cornerstone of the Emory Athletics identity is the primary athletic shield. The shield is reserved for Emory Department of Athletics and Recreation. This primary wordmark is the preferred athletic logo and should be used on the majority of athletic marketing and communications materials and merchandise.

This handbook presents an overview of the Emory University Athletics logo identity system.

Any retail use of the main Emory Eagles shield and standing Swoop logos should include the registration mark. The main Emory Eagles wordmark, banner mark, and Eagle head logos should include the “TM” mark. Custom branded merchandise for the Emory community does not require the “TM” mark with Emory logos.

Use of all logos requires a clear-zone and must follow the other Emory general logo use standards, e.g., no alterations, no combining the logo with text or graphics. See emory.edu/logouse for guidance.

All use of the main athletic logos and varsity logo must be approved by the deputy athletic director for external operations, Lauren Taylor (laurentaylor@emory.edu). Use of club and program logos must be approved by the director of recreation and wellness, April Flint (april.flint@emory.edu). See the identity website for details about merchandise review and approval for custom branded merchandise at emory.edu/merchandise. Email emory.branding@emory.edu for questions on Emory brand standards.

For stationery, business cards, and other official business collateral materials displaying Athletics identity system graphics, contact the deputy athletic director for external operations or brand contacts in Communications and Public Affairs. An illustration of the official Athletics stationery is on page 53. The approved stationery vendor is AlphaGraphics. Stationery can be ordered from AlphaGraphics through EmoryExpress or by calling 770.953.2424.

The Emory University wordmark, school-level logos, other trademarks, unit signatures, and the Athletics logo identity system must follow logo use standards found on the university’s identity website: emory.edu/logos.

The following athletic marks represent a comprehensive selection of logos, banners, and wordmarks.

DO NOT ALTER, DISTORT, OR RECONFIGURE ANY EMORY ATHLETICS IDENTITY MARKS USED IN COMMUNICATIONS, MARKETING, OR MERCHANDISING.

For further information on what not to do, see pages 42–46. For clear zones around logos, see pages 47–48.
The EAGLE SHIELD is the primary Emory Department of Athletics and Recreation logo.

The main Athletics logos include the SHIELD, BANNER MARK, WORDMARK, EAGLE HEAD, EAGLE HEAD + WORDMARK, ONE-LINE LOGO, and EMORY-ONLY WORDMARK.

Contact the deputy athletic director for external operations, Lauren Taylor (laurentaylor@emory.edu), for logo use of the main athletic and varsity logos.

Use of the shield on merchandise is reserved for Emory Athletics and Recreation and the Emory Barnes & Noble bookstore. Logo files can be obtained from Emory Athletics.

HISTORY OF EMORY ATHLETICS

“We are operating an educational institution and not an athletic club...”
—W. D. Thomson, secretary to the Board of Trustees, circa 1925

Emory’s athletics program had an inauspicious start in the tiny town of Union Point, Georgia, about an hour from Oxford, the original site of Emory College. There, in 1884, a group of Emory College students who fashioned themselves into a baseball team were soundly defeated by a squad from the University of Georgia, 17–5. After another lopsided loss (12–3) to UGA two years later and subsequent rumors of gambling and other illicit activities, Emory’s Board of Trustees moved in 1891 to ban Emory students from intercollegiate sports.

It was the beginning of a contentious tug-of-war between students and the university's administration over the value of intercollegiate athletics that would endure for another half century.

In 1897, Frank Clyde Brown, at once a professor of romance languages and “physical culture,” became director of Emory College’s first intramural sports program, which consisted of basketball, football, and a yearly 10-mile foot race. Brown would later be credited with creating one of the first two formal college intramural programs in the country, the other located, ironically, in Oxford, Ohio, at Miami University.

Students yearned for more than intramural sports and advocated strenuously for such. By 1915, Emory College was making plans to move to Atlanta. However, just before leaving in 1919, the board allowed the college to have a final athletic event on campus—an intercollegiate track meet against Mercer, Georgia Tech, and UGA. After the construction of the J. P. Williams Athletic Hall at Oxford in 1907, students spent the better part of a decade petitioning the Board of Trustees to reinstate Emory athletics. Under this unrelenting pressure, the board eventually gave in to student demands,” wrote Clyde Partin Sr. in his history of athletics at Emory, Athletics for All. On the Oxford campus, the question of athletics was set, even though Emory University would struggle in deciding how to proceed academically there for the better part of four decades.

Emory’s board continued to hold its nose regarding a formal intercollegiate athletics program on the Atlanta campus but did allow track and field to continue. A gym was first built on the Atlanta campus in 1923 and a swimming pool in 1927. Soon after, tennis, golf, and swimming were added as intercollegiate sports. A 1928 straw poll by the Emory Wheel found that Emory College students favored a formal intercollegiate track meet against Mercer, Georgia Tech, and UGA. A 1928 straw poll by the Emory Wheel found that Emory College students favored a formal intercollegiate track meet against Mercer, Georgia Tech, and UGA.

In 1940, the Board of Trustees issued a new policy regarding athletics at Emory. In it, they recognized the importance of athletics to a “well-ordered program of physical education” and lifted their prior restrictions on intercollegiate athletics. However, they noted the primacy of academics and would not sign on for sports such as football that required large stadiums and arenas. Now Emory had five intercollegiate sports on the Atlanta campus—swimming, golf, tennis, track, and field, and cross country—and the university’s athletes could travel to sports competitions.

In 1960, Emory’s varsity athletes were named the Eagles and in 1963 the first Emory Sports Fitness camps were opened to the community. In 1983 the George W. Woodruff P. E. Center was opened, along with a new soccer field, intramural field, and 400-meter indoor track. The building’s 4 basketball courts, 50-meter swimming pool, and 13 tennis courts finally allowed the expansion of varsity athletics. Men’s basketball and women’s soccer were added in 1986 and women’s volleyball in 1987. In 1992 Emory became a founding member of the newly created NCAA Division III University Athletic Association (UAA), which includes Brandeis, Carnegie Mellon, Case Western Reserve, NYU, Chicago, Rochester, and WashU.

Since then, Emory College, which fields 19 varsity sports teams on the Atlanta campus, has won 29 NCAA championships and 206 UAA titles.

Excerpted from Athletics for All: A History of Health, Physical Education, Athletics, and Recreation at Emory University, 1836–2005 by Clyde “Doc” Partin Sr., who served in Emory’s physical education department for more than 50 years including as athletic director (1966–1983) and department chair (1966–1986). Partin retired in 2002 and passed away in 2009 at the age of 84, leaving behind an unmatched impact and legacy at Emory.

Swoop

Emory’s official athletic mascot, Swoop, has been the face of the Emory Eagles since the university joined the NCAA upon the establishment of the University Athletic Association (UAA) in 1986. Swoop (formerly nicknamed “Screech” on the Oxford College campus) is a bald eagle and an ever-present fixture on the sidelines of Emory athletic competitions. Once described as “powerful, playful, and at times a little sassy” by the Emory Wheel, Swoop is a beloved figure on campus and off, since the mascot also has represented Emory and the Eagles at appearances at dozens of events in the community.

While Swoop art is not used for varsity or club logos, it is part of the athletics identity system. Merchandise and materials featuring Swoop can be found in the Barnes & Noble bookstores on both campuses.

PROGRAM/DEPARTMENT INFORMATION

SPORTS FITNESS CAMP

Since 1965, Emory Athletics and Recreation has offered Emory Sports Fitness Camp for children in the community to provide a fun and safe environment that fosters a lifelong appreciation for physical activity.

RECREATION AND WELLNESS

Emory Recreation and Wellness provides an academic and recreational health and wellness program through physical activity that enables the campus community to increase its long-term physical, mental, and emotional health. The department includes intramurals, Play4Life, Sports Fitness Camp, Emory Fitness, and Club Sports.

INTRAMURALS

Emory’s intramural sports program provides students, faculty, and staff the opportunity to participate in a multitude of recreational sports and activities while fostering a safe and inclusive environment that promotes lifetime physical fitness, sportsmanship, leadership development, diversity, and athletics for all.

PLAY4LIFE

A new approach to physical education, Play4Life courses promote a knowledge and experience of physical and emotional health, bodily movement, individual and team sports, and various recreational activities as integral to the education of the whole person.

SPORTS MEDICINE

The mission of the sports medicine department is to ensure that Emory University’s student-athletes receive the highest quality care using a holistic and educational approach that addresses all facets of individual well-being through coordinated care, research, and exceeding best practices.

EMORY FITNESS

With group classes, cardio and weight areas, personal training, and instructional classes, Emory Fitness helps community members discover their own path to greater health and fitness.
CLUB SPORTS
Club sports at Emory bridge the gap between intramural sports activities and intercollegiate athletics and give the Emory University community an opportunity to participate in competitive sports activities, improve skill levels, gain leadership experience, and enjoy the recreational and social fellowship derived from sports involvement.

MARKETING AND PROMOTIONS
Marketing and Promotions is the public-facing arm of Emory Athletics, serving its constituencies through ticket sales and event marketing and promotion as well as supervising the use of Emory Athletics marks, brands, and logos for team use and merchandising.

SPORTS INFORMATION
Sports Information serves as the publicity arm of the 19-sport intercollegiate athletics department. Through the Athletics website, social media, newsletters, media placements, and video streaming, Sports Information provides information on upcoming events, contest recaps, and awards and honors earned by both student-athletes and staff. The department also houses and maintains the archives and history of Emory Athletics.

STRENGTH AND CONDITIONING
Emory’s Strength and Conditioning program is committed to helping its student-athletes maximize their athletic potential while decreasing the chance for injury. Strength and Conditioning coaches work with each varsity program to develop sport-specific, year-round training.
The color standards that apply to the Emory Eagles identity marks are detailed above. Color placement and specifications should never be altered.

NOTE: Due to the inconsistent nature of computer monitors, the colors depicted within this standards manual may not match the actual PANTONE® colors. When specifying colors, please refer to the PANTONE® or MADEIRA® number for accurate color reproduction.

GUIDELINES
FOR EMORY ATHLETICS FLY HIGHER MESSAGING

The Emory Eagles Athletics identity is one of Emory University’s most visible representations. Maintaining a strong identity is achieved by a consistent image.

The Fly Higher messaging is a visual complement to the Athletics identity. This visual approach is composed of serif and sans serif font families, Fly Higher tag type treatments, and secondary color palettes. These resources accompany athletic photography to communicate the presence of the Athletics department to Emory audiences. This section provides an overview and guide for use of this identity and messaging.

The Emory University wordmark, school-level logos, other trademarks, and unit signatures follow logo use guidelines found on the university’s identity website at emory.edu/logouse.

All use of Emory Athletics identity marks and tags should be approved by the deputy athletic director for external operations, Lauren Taylor (laurentaylor@emory.edu), and director of recreation and wellness, April Flint (april.flint@emory.edu).
